The murdered man came to Roanoke in 1882 from Halifax county. He served several years on the police force and later was elected city sergeant, retaining the position for several terms. He was a widower and had been rooming alone for several years. He is survived by five children of his own and one stepdaughter. He spent Sunday evening with his son, R. L. Traynham.

Mr. Traynham was 69 years old and an ex Confederate soldier, having served throughout the war in Wilcox's brigade. Robbery was evidently not the incentive as his money was not touched and his valuable gold watch was found hanging near his bed in its accustomed place
